

C-SPAN Announces Multi-Year Distribution Agreement with Hulu + Live TV

Hulu + Live TV extends Americans' Access to C-SPAN's trusted, independent journalism

(September 3, 2025) — C-SPAN announced today that its three public affairs channels will launch this fall on Hulu + Live TV, one of the nation's most popular streaming television services. This agreement expands access to C-SPAN's unfiltered coverage of U.S. government for millions of subscribers nationwide, further strengthening the network's role as an indispensable source of public affairs programming.

The three C-SPAN channels — C-SPAN, C-SPAN2, and C-SPAN3 — will all join Hulu + Live TV's channel lineup. With this new agreement, Hulu is stepping forward as a partner in C-SPAN's mission, joining cable and satellite providers in supporting the network's unique nonpartisan coverage.

C-SPAN is a privately funded non-profit television network, operating free of government money and supported primarily through license fees paid by cable, satellite, and streaming companies.

"We are proud that this agreement will give millions more Americans access to our unfiltered coverage of the nation's political process," said C-SPAN CEO Sam Feist. "For nearly fifty years, C-SPAN via its cable and satellite partners has been dedicated to making government accessible and accountable to the people. This agreement with Hulu reflects our long-standing mission is essential to our society and our democracy."

Unlike any other TV network, C-SPAN provides exclusive, gavel-to-gavel coverage of Congress, congressional hearings, and in-depth public affairs events that are not available anywhere else. Its programming offers Americans the opportunity to see democracy in action, unfiltered and in full context.
